HOLINESS AUDIENCE SHOUTED AS A WOMAN STRUGGLED.

Pessimistic Sermon Preached by the Rev. J. E. Miller, Who Gave a Vivid Picture of Hell-Fire.

The members of the Holiness Association continue to hold sway at Greenwood Park and the attendance at all the meetings is ing so rapidly that the managers are wondering what to do with the new arrivals. The meeting last night was led by Rev. J. E. Miller, of Indianapolis, who discussed "Sin," and the results of wrong-doing. The at the meeting last night and shouted and clapped his hands and sang with the vigor of a Methodist preacher of

Rev. Seth C. Rees, of Chicago, presided and made a few remarks prior to the opening of the service. He advised those on the grounds not to visit too much, but to pray and read most of the time in order to have good results from the session. He explained that certain books had been a great help to him ever since he had become sanctifled. Just before introducing the speaker of the evening, Mr. Rees asked that no conversation be held during the service either inside or out of the pavilion, and as he looked at a crowd of boys who were seated on a stand complacently watching proceedings the evangelist asked that no one smoke within 200 feet of the tabernacle, as, he declared, it was very annoying. MAY ADJUST DIFFICULTY.

Business Agent Collins Investigating Railroad Machinists' Strike.

The strike of about thirty union men of the International Association of Machinists in the Big Four shops at Wabash is being investigated by Edward J. Collins, business agent of the association. Mr. Collins expects to confer with a number of the Big Four officials during the week, and to bring about a settlement. The affair is an entirely local one, but has been growing more serious, as neither party will come to terms, The trouble is said to lie in the number of hours the Big Four has been working their men. The regular working day of the machinist is eight hours, and the Big Four officials at Wabash were working their men ten hours on account of a rush of business.

More Troubles of the Rich.

Money buys a great many pleasant things and it also, incidentally, seems to bring in a lot of household worry.

"Out where we live," said a wealthy suburban dweller, "it is next to impossible to keep what is known as 'help.' How thoroughly American it is that money won' buy everything. All the young men and women who work in our rural neighborhood belong to good country families and they won't stand any suggestions of class precedence in human affairs. A first-class left very suddenly and my wife overheard him behind a hedge telling another man what prompted him to go.

"'Gee," said William, 'ain't some folks too stuck up to walk? I wouldn't work fer ol' Maj. Jones if he rolled me in gold ev'ry day. No, I wouln't. My name's Will, an' him an' Mrs. Jones an' all them kids called me Willyum. Ain't that stuck up-fer ye? Wouldn't even call me Bill "'An' then Maj. Jones, he sez I mus' call them two gals "Mis' Vi'let" an' "Mis' Julia." Gee, ain't that stuck-up-ness fer ye? They calls me "Willyum"; won't even call me "Bill," an' I mus' call them "Mis'. So I quits, an' ol' Maj. Jones can't get nobody to work fer him 'round' here. Naw, sir, not ef he rolled 'em in gold. "Mis' Vi'let an' Mis' Julia!" Well, I reckon!"

The Shirred Gown. New York Telegram.

If you would be dressed comme il faut. then have your gowns shirred. It doesn't seem to make much difference where or Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Garrison, of St. | how; the more originally these gatherings are placed the better, but there isn't a model coming from the other side that hasn't at least some and usually a great deal of fullness drawn into shirrings. It may be difficult for the stout woman, but she must grin and exercise ingenuity to place her fullness where it will do the least

A really charming way of using shirrings women, for the sloping outline does not de-tract from height. Shirrings are put into a waist from the shoulder blades to the ing like an open fan with the top up. That leaves the front free to the belt for a blouse effect. The sleeves are shirred to in billowy ruffles. One or two advance models for gowns to be worn next winter in the house show shirring all around from the belt 'way down to the knees, which is nothing if not extreme. It is not pretty, and most unlikely to become popular. Fine side pleats, little broader than accordion, will be popular. These are charmingly shown on one frock. The petticoat is pleated, while over it from the knees down hang long tabs, ten inches apart, of the same material outlined with narrow bands of embroidery. The close upper fitting of the skirt makes the model a becoming one. This would be particularly pretty in lace, but is nice for any thin material.

Assessment on Louis Hollweg's Property Reduced by Board of Review.

The assessment of Louis Hollweg's lot south of St. Agnes's Academy on North Meridian street, was reduced $30 a front foot yesterday by the County Board of Review. The reduction was asked on the ground that because of the singing and playing at the school the lot had not been a good investment and he has received no satisfactory offers for it. The lot has a frontage of 107 feet on Meridian street and the assessment is $12,960.

The most important assessments yesterday fixed by the board were those of the Indiana Hotel Company (new Claypool), Survived the Thirteen Hoodoo. The William McKinley Club gave a lawr fete on East Michigan street opposite its clubhouse last night which 500 people attended. The proceeds of the affair are to defray the expenses of the club and to purchase new furniture. A special programme had been arranged by acting President George Snyder, consisting of music, recitations and a history of the club, by Attorney M. L. Clawson.

Mr. Clawson said that the club was organized three years ago under the name of the East End Republican Club, but the name was changed last year to the present one in honor of the martyred President. In the beginning the club numbered thirteen members and any ordinary club could not have lived under this handicap, but the club at the present time numbers 300. He said the club stood for all that was good in politics and was organized with the aim in view of building up the Republican party in that ward, to bring the voters together and make recruits, and to put good men in of-
